ABSTRACT

A device for analyzing slides in a microplate format is provided. The device comprises a base with slots for holding a number of planar substrates, which may be spotted with at least an array of biological or chemical molecules of interest. The base is configured to be compatible for use with high-throughput plate-readers or microplate-adapted scanners.